John Anderson's Troubles.—John Audreson is an industrious cart driver of this for bee cty. He with his wife. Mary, and a lard samily of young Addresons, basked in ago, whom a gay deceiver, by name George Jrowns, entered his home as a friend. It was visits became frequent, and John her to suspicious. In the solution of night he monetrated with his spause. He informed are that the repeated visits of Mr. Drowns, during his absence, and the lock wall, and surgisted that she politely request Mr. D. to discontinue his calls. To this Mary resided with bitterness. She said if he, John Anderson, did not like the way his feet. if he, John Anderson, did not like the way his wife enducted herself, he had better seek other quarters; that she held Mr. Drowns in high esteem, and he could come to see her whenever he pleased. From this time things grow worse, trouble increased; Drown's visits become more frequent, and more open. John saw with screw that Drowns had gained the country of his wife but he determined to hear affee into of his wife, but he determined to bear up under his heavy weight of guist, hoping that she who will had his undivided lays, might see the error of her way and turn again to him, her faithful and legal ford. He knew not his fond hones were so so to be blessed. On going home from his work Priday night lest, werr, home from his work Friday fight 1882, weary, and depressed, he was surprised to find, as he may that Drawns had not only carried off his with, but his chilings and all his furniture, except one has chair. John Anderson sat down on that chair and ware. He did not know what to do, but he finding determined to sack radies through the law. He detailed the circumstances to Capt. CARD-It should be generally known that A CARD—It should be generally known that persons so unfortunate as to lose one or more of their teeth need not wait weeks and months for artificial sub-titutes and endure inconvenience, dissgreeable changes in voice, facial expression, &c., but may have artificial teeth made before and inserted immediately after extraction of their natural testh. By this mode a better adaptation, a more pleasant expression and a nearer approach toward preserv-ing the natural harmony of the features are se-cured, and very much of the pain and difficulty experienced in learning to use teeth are also avoided. I have practiced this mode successfully for seven years, and having introduced it here, would be glad to refer any one interested to patients who know of it from experience In treating the natural teeth my object is to preserve every one that time, patience and modern methods of treatment can save. The use of arsente in destroying exposed nerves is condemned by the more enlightened of the dental profession on account of its turning teeth dark, inducing abscoss and finally the less of the teeth. The nerve pulp, which is the source of life to the tooth, should always be treated, when exposed, with a view to its restoration to health. I use no cheap
